

Architect Named for Two New Schools in Torrance

Preliminary planning for two new Torrance elementary schools moved beyond the talking stage Monday evening when the Board of Education named Donley, Bundy and Associates, architects, to begin designing both schools. Trustees authorized the architects to draw new plans for both schools. Planning for the Tract 2200 schools, to be located near Madison Avenue and 236th Street, had been use in 16 to 18 months, ac-ording to S. E. Waldrip, assistant superintendent of schools for business. They will relieve crowded classrooms at Victor and Hickory schools.

WALDRIP SAID the district was considering the possibility of putting the "entire plant in one building," because both sites are small. An alternate plan calls for two-story buildings. Board members want plans prepared for both schools as soon as possible. Victor and Hickory schools are located in expanding areas of the city and portable classrooms have been ordered to prevent double sessions at the schools this year.

The two new schools will not be ready for use until sometime during the 1966-67 school year, Waldrip said.

IN OTHER action, trustees: Authorized the district to hire an architect to design a new child care center. The present facility, adjacent to Torrance High, is inadequate. Awarded contracts for ice cream and milk products to Mayfair Creamery and Ingewood Farms. The two firms will split the district, with Ingewood Farms serving the area west of Hawthorne Avenue.

Awarded a contract to Bain Printing Co. of Lomita for the printing of high school newspapers for North, South, and Torrance high schools. West High will print its own newspaper as part of the new graphic art program at the school.

Plant Tour Survey Now Under Way

The Torrance Chamber of Commerce currently is conducting a survey of area industrial and utility companies to determine which firms schedule public tours of plant facilities. J. Walker Owens, general manager, announced today.

The chamber has been receiving numerous requests for such information from school and civic groups in the Torrance area. Upon completion of the survey any group may inquire at the chamber offices for specific information concerning plant tours.

Local firms are being asked to complete a questionnaire which will provide information as to types of tours offered, tour dates, and the size of groups that can be accommodated.

It is expected that the survey will be completed by Sept. 15.
